

If you're not daring to believe God for the impossible, you're sleeping through some of the best parts of your Christian life.

If the size of your vision for your life isn't intimidating to you, there's a good chance it's insulting to God.

Audacious faith is the raw material that authentic Christianity is made of.

Does the brand of faith you live by produce the kinds of results in your life that you read about in the biblical stories of men and women of faith?

I want to know what it means to live life and do ministry at the speed of God. I want to see God do so much so fast that the world will have to take note.

When you have a dream in your heart, but no earthly idea how to make it happen, keeping your faith intact is a full-time job. But I've discovered that these crises of belief don't have to be the end of faith. They can become the foundation that a stronger faith is built on.

If the dream in your heart isn't biblically based, focused on Jesus, affirmed by the key people in your life, and tethered to your passions, gifts, and life experiences, chances are, you're way off prompt.

The progression of Sun Stand Still faith is: seize God's vision, activate your faith, and make your move.

What we call a miracle is really just the right combination of your ordinary ingredients and God's extraordinary expertise. And when God's super collides with your natural, sparks will fly.

No matter who pays your salary, you're a full-time employee of the kingdom of God. And wherever you work, that's your ministry. Whatever you're good at, that's your calling.

When it comes to the ministry of the local church, I believe every member is a link in the chain of the life-change process.

Over the course of his (Jesus) three-year earthly ministry, most of his recorded miracles happened in the marketplace or by the side of the road, not in the synagogue.

Sometimes audacity shimmers and shines. Most of the time the packaging is nondescript. I like to think God conceals his extraordinary intentions in ordinary people to protect the extraordinary value of his purpose in our lives. Don't be disillusioned by a lack of special effects in your life.

If you'll do the believing, he'll do the achieving.

Hearing from God is exhilarating. Hearing from God is terrifying.

Please don't wait until you have 100 percent certainty to follow Jesus boldly. Whatever you do, don't take your cues from the complacent Christians around you. Lots of people in your life might be perfectly content with kiddie-pool Christianity.

Salvation is free. Obedience can be very costly. These two facts aren't contradictory. In fact, this tension is at the heart of the gospel.

Before God can do an impossible work in your world, you need to let him do a deep work in your heart. God's invisible work in you prepares you for his visible works through you.

Sometimes God has to let your dreams die so that his vision for you can come alive.

A high calling often exacts a high price. But it always yields an astronomical return.

Our view of God is the most important thing about us.

Hear the Word. Speak the Word. Do the Word.

Every time God presents a significant opportunity, it's formed in the crucible of crisis. It's connected to danger.

Between the promise and the payoff there's always a process. That process is where your audacious faith comes into play. Too many people forget the promise and forfeit the payoff because they faint in the process. The process is the point.

The ability to stay tuned in to what you've heard when you can't see any proof is what separates audacious faith from wishful thinking.
